McGill asked to fund Union

The Students' Society Executive has approached the Administration for help in running the University Centre, which has been a financial strain on Students' Society funds for many years.

Students' Society President George Archer said yesterday that the ever-increasing maintenance costs of the Union have been taking unreasonable amounts of Students' Society funds away from student activities and services. He said he has been discussing possible solutions to this problem with the Students' Council and the Administration but that no definite solution has yet been reached.

Vice-Principal Elgil Pedersen, who has been advising the Executive about the options available, said that the Union will cost students more in the years ahead. He said the Administration cannot just give money to help Students' Society cover the maintenance costs of the Union "because we don't have enough to spare in our present budget and besides, university regulations prohibit such a gift."

Pedersen said that funds for the Union could thus come either from a fee hike, which would have to be approved in a student referendum, or through an increase of the university's students services assessments.

There is general agreement that both of these options have problems. It would be difficult to interest the required 300 students to show up at an open meeting to call for a referendum to raise fees. The referendum itself would then require a 20% turnout at the polls.

The other option—an increase in funds from student services, which is run by the Administration—would have to ACTION! That's what the St. Urbain Street Action Committee needs in its attempt to save a building from demolition.

The building, on the corner of St. Urbain and Milton streets was originally the nurses' residence of the Ste. Jeanne d'Arc Hospital, but most of its twelve large six-room flats have been left vacant for the past two years, despite a critical housing shortage in Montreal.

La Corporation de l'Hopital Sainte Jeanne d'Arc, owners of the building, hasn't said what it intends to do with the property after the demolition is completed.

The St. Urbain Street Action Committee, a local citizens group concerned with preserving the resources of the St. Urbain neighbourhood is demanding that the hospital state its plans clearly and that these plans correspond with the wants and needs of the community.

The Women's Information and Referral Centre, whose offices have been housed in the St. Urbain building for the past two years have joined with the action committee in seeking a public inquiry into the proposed demolition.

Lise Moisan, from Women's Info says that the two groups will challenge the Hospital's decision, even though the groups "don't have a legal foot to stand on." Referring to the need for low-income housing in the St. Urbain area, both for apartments and office space for small community-minded groups she said: "It's an interesting test of community consciousness. We'll struggle to retain the building because it's important that people have control over services in their community." "Whatever the final decision," Lise Moisan said, "the Hospital and the Action Committee will benefit the community most by serving it mutually."

be approved by the Student Services Co-ordinating Committee, the Senate, and the Board of Governors. In addition, the Senate would probably insist on a careful delineation of the university's responsibilities before such a course would be approved.

Pedersen said, "Virtually everybody wants the Students' Society to be autonomous and to be a strong independent organization." To insure this autonomy, he recommends that the Students' Society pay the university to provide the maintenance services. Pedersen added that he opposes an absolute surrendering of the Union to the Administration.

THE MCGILL DAILY IS YOURS

Join us, write us, call us, and make us better

Last year, we covered campus news extensively. We also analyzed Quebec, Canadian, and international events, including the coup in Chile and liberation struggles in Southern Africa. Supplements on topics such as women and medicine were also featured. We plan to continue this type of coverage and we need your help to do it. If you feel you have something to offer as a reporter, photographer, layout worker, graphic artist, or cartoonist, join us and help. Experience is not needed. The date of the first organizational meeting will be announced in the Daily soon.

You don't blow an extraordinary idea on an ordinary shoe.

By now you're probably aware that Roots are not like other kinds of footwear. The heel is lower to give you the natural kind of walk you'd get by going barefoot in sand. The arch is supported, so if you spend much time on your feet you'll now spend it in much greater comfort. The rocker sole helps spring you off on each footstep, so walking becomes a little less work than it ever was before. But a big part of Roots' success lies in not how they're made, but how well. Only the finest grade Canadian hides are selected. These are hand-crafted into Roots, simply because, for much of our production, the most efficient machine is still the human hand. This is why, of all the reasons we could give you for trying Roots, none would fit quite so well as the shoe itself.

Inflation eroding society budget

by Michael Johnson

Last year's Students' Society executive presented a very bleak picture of the finances of the Students' Society, and although their cries of "financial crisis" were somewhat exaggerated it is clear that action must be taken if the Students' Society is to continue financing student clubs and activities. The crux of the problem is that the Students' Society's income has remained the same since 1964, in spite of rampant inflation.

Possible solutions

The Students' Society executive and the Students' Council are presently approaching the financial problem on two levels.

We are working on a more efficient system of allocating funds which includes the development of a global budget for the Students' Society. In the past, allocations have been made by evaluating budgets in isolation from the others, with no parameters or guidelines.

We are also investigating the possibility of having Student Services take over the costs of cleaning and maintaining the University Centre.

This possibility will be discussed in the Daily and in other forums sometime in the near future.

The Students' Society miraculously spent $14,000 less than the $335,000 it received last year from Student Society fees and the interest on the investment reserve fund, but this was accomplished only by decreasing the amount spent on student activities by $10,000 and by expending $30,000 of the investment reserve fund.

This year the total amount available for students' activities will drop from last year's $125,000 to approximately $95,000 because of a probable decrease in revenue from Students' Society fees and because of a projected $20,000 increase in the operating costs of the University Centre.

The Students' Society receives the bulk of its revenue from students' fees. Twenty-four dollars per year is paid by all students except those in the professional and graduate faculties, who pay $14.50.

The Students' Society's expenditures can be broken down into the following categories: students activities (projected to be $98,000 this year); McGill University Centre ($145,000); office and administrative ($50,000); and general ($20,000).

Money spent on students' activities supports: (1) publications, such as the McGill Daily, the yearbook and the student handbook; (2) media groups, such as Amateur radio, Radio McGill, the Film Society and the Debating Union; (3) dramatic groups, including the Players Club, Red and White Revue, and the Savoy Society; (4) international student groups like the International Students' Association and the McGill Chinese Students' Society; (5) community groups, such as Campus Legal Aid and Interaction McGill; (6) special interest groups and various other services including the information centre and the cultural and entertainment committee.

High expenses for Union

In operating the University Centre the Students' Society's major expenses are: salaries and wages ($50,000), cleaning ($25,000), repairs and renovations ($20,000), telephones ($10,000), and security ($15,000).

Office and administrative expenses include salaries and benefits for our comptroller, secretary-treasurer, book-keeper and secretary, auditors and lawyers fees, insurance, and various other items.

The area of general expenses covers meal allowances for the executive and other student representatives, election costs, bad debts, costs of the preliminary work on the pub, etc.

It should be noted that in the past few years the Students' Society has also given large grants to faculty societies. Due to the shortage of funds this year, it will be impossible to give grants to faculties, except at the cost of severe cutbacks in the funding of the Students' Society activities listed above.

Although the Students' Society is still on the map (please refer to pamphlet given out at registration), it is important that serious action be taken now to allow the Students' Society to regain its former vitality.

Potential bomb discovered in Union

by Leonard Bloom

Early this summer chemistry professor L.E. St. Pierre defused explosive chemicals found in the Union by a fire inspector on a routine inspection.

According to Internal Vice-President Michael Johnson, the vats of crystalline ammonium picrate, a by-product of Opportunities for Youth project three years ago, could have destroyed the building if they had exploded.

The fire inspector ordered the three vats moved from the emergency exit in the basement. Students' Society Comptroller Tom Cross asked St. Pierre to check the chemical before the vats were removed. St. Pierre found the chemical to be highly explosive in its crystalline state and dissolved it in order to defuse it.

The Union, a youth hostel in the summer, had to be evacuated.

The chemical, used by a student attempting to find a process for desalinating water, was originally in solution but through negligence had been allowed to evaporate.

Johnson said it was a "defused event — it didn't reach its full proportions."

Ford: The image and the man

This is the last part of a two-part article on Gerald Ford.

by Craig Toomey

Who is the real Gerald Ford? Is he the "Mr. Clean of Middle America" that the commercial media keeps telling us can bring America together?

His voting record in Congress and his actions since he stumbled into the presidency bear out Ford's true nature—one which contrasts drastically with his public image.

These are the facts

During his 25 years in Congress Ford's voting record has been embarrassingly conservative. He has voted against virtually all social welfare legislation; he has consistently attempted to soften civil rights bills through amendments; and he has moved to weaken minimum wage bills. In 1970 he led an unsuccessful bid to impeach Justice William O. Douglas, one of the strongest advocates of civil rights on the Supreme Court.

Ford has been an unswerving follower of party lines throughout his political career. He has rarely disagreed with his good friend Richard Nixon on any major piece of legislation, and recently attested to Nixon's innocence in the Watergate affair to the very end.

"In the field of foreign policy," he said in 1973, "my views are virtually identical with those of the President." Ford has always been a good follower. His record bears this out.

• Vietnam: Ford, who describes himself as an internationalist, has always been a hawk in South-East Asia, in the tradition of Curtis LeMay (George Wallace's vice-presidential candidate in 1968), who advocated dropping the bomb "to end all hostilities in the area."

In 1966 Ford declared, "I have never been able to understand why the Johnson administration has not more fully utilized our capability to destroy significant military targets in North Vietnam. This is one way to convince the North Vietnamese and the Vietcong that the price of continuing aggression is too high."

• Foreign Policy: In the late 1950's, Ford headed a group of 15 GOP House members who spent four months studying defense and economy. They concluded that Eisenhower's policies in the Cold War—which included opposition to socialism and communism and continued U.S. expansionism, leading to such blunders as the Bay of Pigs and the Vietnam War—were the right ones. Since then, Ford's stand on the question of detente and foreign affairs in general has changed in line with Nixon's.

Ford has consistently stood firm on the question of a strong defense. The U.S. defense budget, amounting to a third of the entire federal budget, was left unscathed by his recent "economy drive." In fact, while essentially pushing the same austerity programs as the Nixon Administration, the new Ford Administration is insisting on more military spending combined with across-the-board slashes on social welfare legislation!

"Soft-Headed liberals"

• Law and Order: Ford has always been a strong advocate of the use of force and pressure to abate U.S. crime. In 1969 he said legislation should be implemented to "withhold funds from those students who are involved in campus riots."

In 1967 he said "wiretapping and electric eavesdropping... are essential weapons to those who guard our nation's security."

A year later: "There is and has been an atmosphere of permissiveness in this country, a mistaking of license for liberty and an over-concern for the rights of the accused at the expense of the injured. This imbalance must be corrected. It won't be corrected by the Johnson-Humphrey Administration or by soft-headed liberals in Congress—but only by Republicans and others who recognize that law and order, 'with justice', must prevail in America."

• Truth Squad: During the 1960 campaign, Ford was one of three representatives in the "truth squad" set up by the Republican Party to trail Senator John F. Kennedy during the 1960 presidential campaign. When Kennedy was elected and delivered his State of the Union message, Ford signed a statement denouncing the message as a "shabby attempt to paint a bleak picture of the national economy and international system."

Mr. Clean?

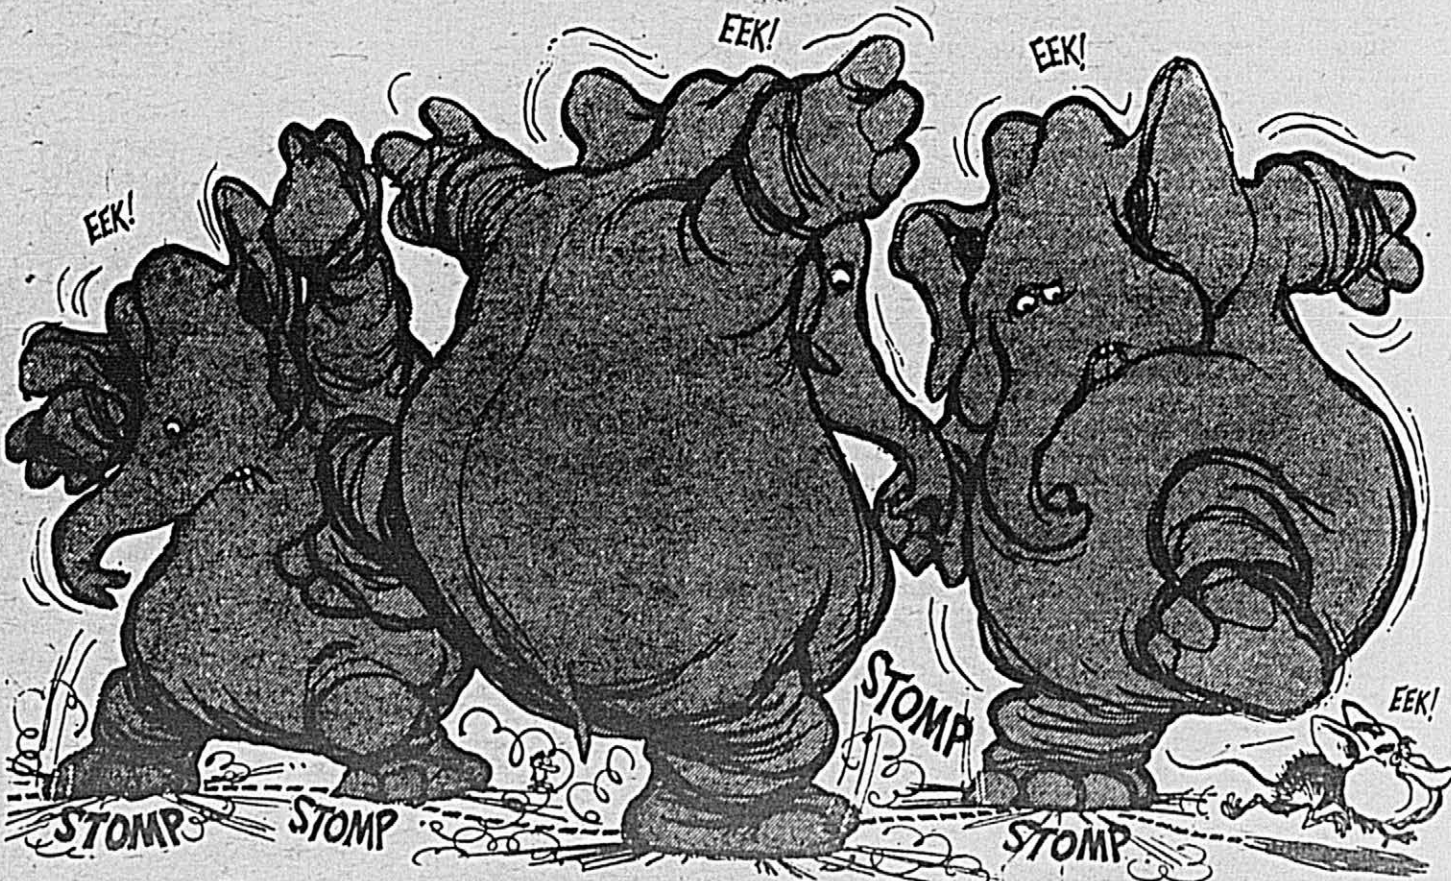

Congress carried out an extensive investigation of Ford's background before ratifying his nomination to the vice-presidency. One conclusion can be drawn from this much publicized spectacle. The powerful men in Washington simply couldn't afford another Nixon-like scandal which would further expose the deceit and corruptness that dominates U.S. politics.

The investigation, because of this, was a meaningless exercise. It proved little: Ford had no criminal record, and he had never parked illegally. His real crime is an almost unblemished record of opposition to legislation that would benefit the working class and minorities—that was not even taken into account. But what else could be expected from a government that places the interests of these groups at the bottom of their list of priorities?

Kissinger, CIA, and the death of Chile

By Charlie Clark

Recent disclosures about the role of the Central Intelligence Agency in the overthrow of Chile's Allende government have renewed public concern over that organization's interference in the internal affairs of foreign countries.

In secret congressional testimony revealed by the American press two weeks ago, CIA Director William E. Colby acknowledged CIA tampering in Chilean affairs. A later news item charged that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger was chiefly responsible for the intervention.

In testimony before the House Armed Services Committee last April, Colby admitted that $8 million allocated by the Nixon Administration between 1970 and 1973 was used clandestinely to "destabilize" the elected government of Salvador Allende.

Colby made it clear however, that the CIA made no move without the approval of the secret top-level panel known as the 40 Committee, headed and virtually controlled by Henry Kissinger.

The millions of dollars in secret funds were used to bribe members of the Chilean congress, bolster anti-Allende political parties, buy the support of right-wing newspapers, and support disruptive labor strikes. American companies volunteered to serve as conduits in the implementation of the funds.

Colby said that as far back as 1964, when Allende was a presidential candidate, the CIA tested its technique of using heavy cash payments to bring down an anti-U.S. government.

U.S. money spurs coup

The State Department had always denied any direct involvement in the decline of Chile's limping economy in spite of the fact that the Nixon Administration had drastically reduced foreign aid grants to Allende's government. The American controlled World Bank has also refused to aid the ailing country because "Allende was a poor credit risk." President Allende had complained, before his overthrow and death, that larger powers were cooperating to strangle and paralyze the Chilean economy.

Exposure of Colby's secret testimony throws light on the subtleties of more recent public declarations by the CIA on its Chilean operations. Last week, before a hostile panel consisting of former CIA, Defense and State Department officials, two congressmen and Daniel Ellsberg, Colby claimed that the CIA took no part in the Chilean coup a year ago but admitted that they "did look forward to a change of government".

He explained that one million dollars was earmarked for clandestine use in Chilean affairs as recently as one month before the bloody coup d'etat, but that it was never implemented since the work was soon done "on its own".

Secret "40 Committee"

The State Department is no less subtle in its denials of any involvement in the coup. It has always stressed "no direct United States involvement". It now turns out that the State Department was simply answering charges based on rumor and, because of certain tension between the State Department bureaucracy and Secretary of State Kissinger himself, neglected to comment on the possible role of the secret 40 Committee.

The 40 Committee was established during the Kennedy Administration as a comeback effort following the disastrous fiasco of the Bay of Pigs invasion in which the CIA, on Kennedy's impetus, attempted to foster an overthrow of the Castro regime in Cuba. The committee authorizes all secret CIA activities. With a strongman like Kissinger at the helm, it has become what Daniel Ellsberg called "an invisible government."

Henry Kissinger's involvement in the Chilean tragedy extends beyond a mere rubber stamping of CIA projects. According to Nixon Administration sources quoted by The New York Times, Kissinger and Nixon were especially dismayed with Allende's victory in the Chilean elections, but Kissinger was anxious to impress upon his president that he was "on top of the situation."

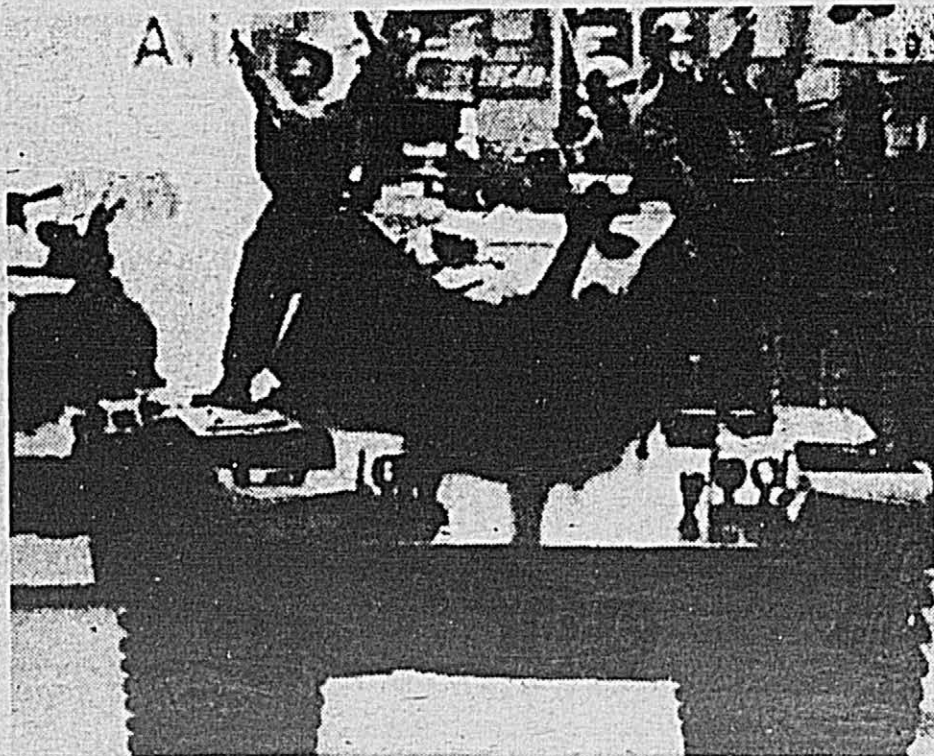

It was then that Kissinger, as chairman of the National Security Council, became a "virtual Chilean desk officer" and held extensive meetings that resulted in voluminous memoranda calling for the cessation of all U.S. aid to Chile.

Kissinger's one man show

This was a dismaying blow to Kissinger's underlings in the State Department, who once again, felt that they had been sidestepped. This is how Kissinger achieves the diplomacy that puts him on the cover of Newsweek streaking through the clouds as "Super K." He conducts his affairs independently while deemphasizing the team effort of an advisory staff.

This summer, Henry Kissinger, America's indispensable hero, almost burst into tears and threatened to resign when a reporter for an undergraduate university newspaper pointed to contradictory statements that the Secretary had made concerning the wire-tapping of his colleagues on the National Security Council and staff. Kissinger has thus far declined comment on the recent disclosures on Chile.

Colby and other defenders of the CIA maintain that its clandestine activities are vital to "National Security." But in the light of recent developments in Greece and Cyprus, and India's public suspicions about CIA aspirations, the American people are becoming increasingly uneasy about the actions of the Central Intelligence Agency. Congressional investigations are already underway. Meanwhile, there is movement in Congress to block or reduce the Ford Administration's request for $20 million in aid to Chile's ruling military junta.

Letters

Pardon me, but your dagger is showing

To the Daily:

Reading Ford: Only the face has changed. (Daily, September 18, 1974) reminded me of a phone conversation I had with friends in Yonkers, N.Y., which had a chilling truth in it.

Ford's pardon of Nixon's crimes while in the Whitehouse were not accepted by the American people (not to mention Canadians or overseas). Also, my New York friends pointed out that the President's pardon has truly forestalled a full disclosure of Watergate criminality and immorality because—in part—the investigators' hands are not without blood stains either (are the hands of any politicians of developed countries?)

But what can the status quo supporters do now? If the people are still not satisfied and if the esteemed American government must at any cost maintain its "honorable" image, what can be done now?

My friends suggest the chilling idea that old Nixon will have to be bumped off like those unsuccessful mafiosi characters. Are they way off in their speculation? Increasingly there have been more reports of Nixon's failing good health due to moral shock, etc. How far to a heart attack? You cannot undo a pardon; you cannot replace Ford or diminish his embryonic Presidential popularity. But you can and must satisfy the violence-fed brainwashed television sheep of the U.S.A. with murderous demagoguery! Let's see what happens. What is really sad is that I couldn't even feel the loss because Nixon's passing may in fact be a great gain!

Costi's sacking questionable

To the Daily:

The first issue of the Daily has informed us of yet another instance of corruption within the Students' Society.

Frank Costi has served for years as a qualified building manager of the Students' Union. His forced resignation on the grounds of dereliction of duty in "supervising cleaning and maintenance" was at best questionable. His replacement by the internal vice-president is a clear case of conflict of interest. Johnson, according to the Daily, "requested Costi's resignation." Yet this same man was allowed to take on Costi's job at $130 a week.

This "people's" executive must explain its action to the student body without hesitation. The immediate removal of Johnson from his newly acquired position is necessary as well. If this executive is to regain the confidence of the students,
